WOW...

Can we expect that number (i.e. 648%) to keep on growing in the coming years?

Unfortunate as it is, Zika, Dengue and other mosquito-borne disease will keep on spreading to new areas, resulting increased need for protection and remedies.

Under such circumstances many companies will try to take part in this fast growing market. However, not all repellent are 'born' the same, as described in this article:

" A new study from New Mexico State University has found that several mosquito repellent products—including some sprays, wearable devices, and candles—don't actually work." (Consumer Reports)

Based on what do you chose your own mosquito repellent?
